

Car Seats Premies and Small Babies

Small babies and premature infants may not fit well in some car seats. When selecting a car seat you must consider both proper harness fit and the manufacturers' lowest weight limit rating.

Shoulder Harness Position

Rear-facing harnesses must attach to the car seat slots at or below the infant's shoulders. Caregivers should look for car seats with the lowest harness slot position and insert padding provided by the manufacturer, which allows for a better fit. Do not assume that all car seats are the same!

Snug Fit

In order for a harness to function properly in a crash, it must fit properly to an infant. The harness should fit close to the body, without sagging, across all body segments - shoulders, torso, and legs.

To determine whether the harness is snug enough, pinch webbing in an up and down direction along any part of the webbing as it crosses the body.

IMPORTANT: Do not add additional padding that was not included with the car seat. The padding may obstruct proper harness fit.
