PHYSICIANS

Cardiology

Cardiologists diagnose and treat diseases of the heart and blood vessels, including heart attack, valve disease, high blood pressure and some arrhythmias. Cardiologists may have a certain specialty of focus. Non-invasive cardiologists focus on the detection, treatment and management of heart disease, often using external tests rather than instruments inserted into the body to evaluate and diagnose cardiac disorders. Interventional cardiologists specialize in invasive but nonsurgical, catheter-based procedures to assess and treat heart conditions.

Cardiac Electrophysiology

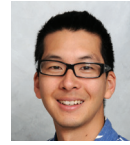

Cardiac electrophysiologists, or cardiac EPs, are doctors who treat rhythm problems of the heart called arrhythmias. Your health care provider may refer you to a cardiac EP if you have symptoms of heart rhythm problems, such as dizziness, fainting and fluttering feelings.
